CALL FOR NOMINATIONS TO THE BOARD

About the Society of Construction Law of Australia

The Society of Construction Law Australia was established in 2009. Since then, with the support of Australia's vibrant construction law community, we have been able to achieve a great deal, including:

- membership of over 1,200 members, representing all States and Territories;
- annual conferences each year;
- seminars and domestic and international video discussions on cutting-edge topics;
- the Brooking Prize for construction law essays;
- the annual Stynes Address;
- Scholarship Support Grants; and
- formal contributions to law reform.

This is no time for resting upon laurels, however: we are determined to build upon these foundations to ensure that the Society reaches its potential and becomes a driving force in the Australian construction industry.

Ours is very much an organisation run by our members for our members. And, in order to sustain and expand the Society's ability to give real value to you, as our members, the Board and Committees which administer the Society need your help.

The role of Directors of the Society

The role of a SoCLA Director is a volunteer and active leadership one. Directors are expected to:

- Be familiar and comply with the Constitution, strategy, policies, and procedures of the Society.
- Attend regular Board meetings held at least each 6 weeks by Videocon.
- Attend the annual conference and an annual Board strategy weekend.
- Attend other SoCLA leadership meetings as required to support SoCLA activities and strategy.
- Actively promote SoCLA to external organisations and form relationships that promote SoCLA's Strategic plans.
- Have completed or commit to undertaking Director training with the Australian Institute of Company Directors with the financial support of SoCLA.
- Take on executive and leadership roles and tasks in implementing the Society's strategic plans and in supporting subcommittees.

For this reason, SoCLA encourages prospective Board members to be active in the Society's activities, and to consider their other professional and personal commitments prior to nominating for a Board position.

Directors are not paid for their time, or in the usual course, for expenses associated with the role.

The Board receives reports from the sub-committees of the Society and provides guidance to the sub-committees as to the activities which might be pursued by those sub-committees. Much of the operational work of the Society is undertaken through these sub-committees.

In addition the Board meets in person twice per year for a full day. One of these meetings is held near the time of the annual national conference.

In addition to receiving reports direct from subcommittees there is also a Management Committee consisting of the chairs of the subcommittees and at least one Board member that aids in the communication between the strategic Board responsibilities and the operational subcommittees.

The Board also considers issues such as the Society's Conference, the establishment of relationships with other organisations, communication with Government and the making of submissions on matters relevant to the construction industry, the production of reports or research on matters relevant to the construction industry and the identification and progression of other issues of interest to the members of the Society. The Society welcomes new ideas and perspectives for consideration.
